Online Application Is Now Available to All Applicants

(ROCKVILLE, MD, June 28, 2006) --- The American Registry for Diagnostic Medical Sonography (ARDMS) now offers all applicants the option to apply for an examination online. All physical principles and instrumentation examination applications, as well as all corresponding specialty examination applications, are now available in an online format.

The online application is offered as another application option, in addition to applying via application book and scanform. ARDMS' realized that in this technology-driven age, applicants need to have the option to apply online. Now, they have a choice.

The simple application process can now be completed in three easy steps. First, an applicant will fill out the easy online form. After filling out the online application, the applicant will be able to pay online, instantly. Payment is accepted at the close of the online application process. Then, the applicant simply has to send in their required supporting document to the ARDMS office by the specified date in order to complete the online application process.

Interested applicants can find everything they need to apply online, on the ARDMS Web site, www.ARDMS.org. Here, they can download a copy of the *ARDMS Information and Examination Application Booklet*. Then, when ready to apply online, all an applicant has to do is click on "Apply Online."

ARDMS is confident that applicants will find this new service a quicker, easier and more convenient way to apply for ARDMS examinations.
